Whitlowe R. Green College of Education professor publishes edited volume on research surrounding the High School to College Transition

UNIVERSITY PRESS OF AMERICA®, INC. publishing across academic disciplines since 1975

"The transition from high school to college is a critical time in students' academic careers that too often determines their continuation in college. In response, Terence Hicks and Chance W. Lewis have assembled an impressive cadre of leading scholars who provide compelling insight into the student transition experience, explicate the dire need for faculty-student and counselor-student interactions, and overview new strategies and programs that serve as promising markers for innovation. This volume is a must read for researchers and scholars who desire to improve outcomes for first-year collegians."

—J. LUKE WOOD, PhD, associate professor, San Diego State University, and co-founder and editor emeritus of the Journal of African American Males in Education (JAAME)

"Hicks and Lewis offer a body of research that further refines the focus for public schools, colleges, and universities, in providing a more effective transition from high school to college, resulting in higher retention and graduation rates from college."

-ROBERT P. TAYLOR, EdD, superintendent of Bladen County Schools, North Carolina

High School to College Transition Research Studies offers two uniquely designed sections that provide a mixture of quantitative and qualitative research findings surrounding a diverse group of college students. This ground-breaking book by Terence Hicks and Chance W. Lewis provides the reader with valuable findings on topics such as student/faculty interactions, academic/social integration, and college preparation.

TERENCE HICKS is the former dean of the Whitlowe R. Green College of Education at Prairie View A&M University, Texas and the recipient of the 2013 Robert B. Howsam Award from the Texas Association of Colleges for Teacher Education.

CHANCE W. LEWIS is the Carol Grotnes Belk Distinguished Professor of Urban Education at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte and the executive director of the University of North Carolina at Charlotte's Urban Education Collaborative.

UNIVERSITY PRESS OF AMERICA*, INC. 800-462-6420 • www.rowtran.com

HIGH SCHOOL TO COLLEGE TRANSITION RESEARCH STUDIES

Edited by TERENCE HICKS and CHANCE W. LEWIS

Dr. Terence Hicks, a professor in the Department of Educational Leadership and Counseling co-edited a book entitled "High School to College Transition Research Studies" with Dr. Chance Lewis, who is the Carol Grotnes Belk Distinguished Professor of Urban Education at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte and the Executive Director of the University of North Carolina at Charlotte's Urban Education Collaborative.

2

The High School to College Transition Research Studies book offers two uniquely designed sections that discusses and addresses the transition from high school to college and some of the major efforts and interventions under way by various universities across the United States to improve college readiness, particularly among low-income and minority students. The High School to College Transition book showcases a group of talented scholars from the University of Kentucky, University of California (Irvine) (, the University of Texas at El Paso, the University of Nebraska(Lincoln), San Diego State University, State University of New York, Binghamton and Texas State University. The High School to College Transition Research Studies book is published by University Press of America, Inc./Rowman Littlefield Publishing Group.