

DISPOSITIONS OF ADVANCED AND INITIAL CANDIDATES

The Whitlowe R. Green College of Education continues to prepare candidates to be practitioners who possess the knowledge and skills of their profession. The candidates will in turn utilize this knowledge in a way that will positively impact schools and the larger community. In executing their duties, the faculty in the College of Education is guided by the conceptual framework and the core values of the college, the general education requirements of the University; and the content, teaching, administrative, and counseling standards of the State of Texas, as well as the national professional organizations.

Dispositions are patterns of behaviors shown toward students, families, colleagues, and other members of learning communities. These dispositions impact student learning, motivation, and development in addition to having an impact on the candidate's professional growth. In addition to disposition-related standards already assessed via programmatic assessments, the Unit has agreed upon professional dispositions as reflected in the core values of the Unit. These twelve core values outline the dispositions that the faculty, Unit and professional community value in teachers and other professional school personnel, and are directly mapped on to the Unit's Conceptual framework.

The disposition instruments for advanced candidates and for initial candidates are shown in 1.4.e. All candidates and graduates from the College of Education Programs, both at the initial and advanced levels, are expected to demonstrate these dispositions. Each candidate's disposition is assessed both by the candidate and the course instructor in an effort to be consistent as well as minimize bias. The resulting data is a compounded average of both the candidate's and course instructor's assessment.

The dispositions for both advanced and initial candidates in the college were expressed with the following grading criteria: Target, Acceptable, and Unacceptable. The analyses of both levels of candidates are expressed in the tables for each semester from spring 2011 to spring 2013. The tables show the summary of the average dispositions based on the candidates rating of themselves, as well as the faculty evaluation of the candidates.
