Athelda Ensley author of "M" Inent Domain". This collection of female writers include Poetry, Mystery, Fiction and Non-fiction. Zandra Bosie explores tiers of emotion defining the human condition through poetry. Athelda Ensley uses Christian elements in her mystery novels. Kimberley Baker started her own publishing company because of the obstacles in the publishing industry. Arlether Wilson, a Police officer, and abuse advocate takes her readers inside the life of a remarkable little girl who was able to survive what many consider impossible. Nekisha-Michelle Bakre's self-help book uses her experiences, intuition, and key life practices to help and challenge others to move beyond complacency and release the fear associated with achieving great success and prosperity.

Each of these amazing women have powerful stories to tell. In the spirit of sisterhood please show your support for these female writers on March 26, 2009 at 6:00 p.m. A reception follows the presentations.

While reading the speech he was amazed at the broad scope of subjects Dr. King addressed and the intensity of his words. He noted that much of what was said is still quite relevant to black people's lives today.

The more Willie read the speech he noticed parallels found in the Bible and history. This encouraged him to write Entering the Promised Land. Willie states his book is about "deciphering the true meaning of words as they relate to the history of black people. Once you have read this book, perhaps more than once, you will have what I believe is a true sense of black people's heritage and history. This book is an attempt to cultivate true respect and admiration for the long and turbulent history of African-descended peoples and their struggle against adversity. "

"This book [Entering the Promised Land] should stimulate your thinking and reasoning about history and how it transcends time and relates to our present day".

Willie J. Alexander's presentation is scheduled for February 18th at 6:00 at the NW Campus and February 26th at 11:00 a.m. at the John B. Coleman Library on the main Prairie View A&M University campus.

Grant Writing Workshop @ NW Campus

Raising funds is an investment in the future for any non-profit, or institution. Building a list of funding prospects can help in retaining and acquiring support for your programs and research. Fund-raising is an art as well as a science and there are many resources available to assist in the grant seeking process. The John B. Coleman Library will host a Grant Writing Workshop, February 21, 2009 at 9:30 a.m. to 2:00 p.m.

The workshop will help participants identify relevant grant agencies, discuss the differences between foundation grants and government grants, and the components of a grant proposal.

The instructor for the workshop is Elizabeth Jean Brumfield the Distance Services Librarian. She will demonstrate various software used to research funding agencies and will give an overview of the grant writing process. A light breakfast and lunch will be provided.

Registration is required. To register please call 713-790-07282 or email: ejbrumfield@pvamu.edu

The workshop will be held at the NW Campus, 16000 Stuebner Airline Road, Suite #130, Spring, TX 77379.

Reigniting the Spirit of Sisterhood—The Art Women's History Month @NW Campus

Quilting has long been an art form of expression and one of practicality. There is a rich history associated with quilting. Different stories are told in just about every country, nationality or race about why quilting started and how quilts were used.

Quilting has been linked to slavery and the Underground Railroad. Although some say there is no documentation to prove the association. It was said that Abolitionist used quilts to tell stories, give direction and inform runaway slaves.

Quilts were also sold to finance the freeing of slaves. Women were instrumental in the making of the quilts which is also true today.

On March 10, 2009 at 6:00 the Millennium Quilters Association will exhibit some of their quilts for Women's History Month. Prairie View A&M University's theme: "Reigniting the Spirit of Sisterhood" applies to this group of women who design quilts and give them to non-profit agencies so that the agencies can auction the quilts for fund raising.

Please join the Coleman Library and the NW Campus in honoring Women's History Month through the Arts.

New Library Resources

The John B. Coleman Library has purchased two new databases: SAGE Publications and Haworth Press. The library has access to more than half of the 500 journals published by Sage. Haworth Press has over 200 journals. Students and faculty can access these and other databases by using either their student or faculty ID and password. For students the process of accessing library resources has been made seamless by the creation of a direct link on the J.B. Coleman Library's homepage: <http://www.pvamu.edu/pages/3649.asp>. With more courses being offered online the library decided to explore various ways to assist students electronically. We are purchasing more online journals, and software including Eres—the online reserve system. The library is also working on ways to promote Information Literacy or library instruction electronically. Currently most library instruction is done face to face, scheduled by faculty for their class or during the Make Time For Research Workshops on campus. In the future we hope to be able to offer alternatives through eCourses or the website. Please continue to watch for the coming updates and announcements on library resources.

January 20, 2009 Presidential Inauguration Watch

Prairie View A&M University hosted a Presidential Inauguration Watch, January 20, 2009. While Washington D.C. had over 1 million people attending the Inauguration speech, Prairie View can boast that our celebration was just as successful with a standing room only crowd of students, staff and faculty. Some office and departments hosted their own events, the John B. Coleman Library was one such department, but for the most part everyone attended the event held in the Student Center. Renee Williams, Equal Opportunity Officer in the Department of Student Affairs and Institutional Relations organized the event.

Barack Obama became America's first black president on January 20, 2009, 200 years to the day that President Abraham Lincoln gave his second Presidential Inauguration speech.

Dr. E. Johanne Thomas Smith, Provost & Senior Vice President for Academic Affairs encouraged students to remember and to reflect on the significance of the day.

President Obama's Inauguration speech stressed cooperation, unity and action. He declared that we must choose "hope over fear, unity of purpose over conflict and discord." He said "as the scriptures says the time has come to do away with childish things" it is time to "end petty grievances and false promises, the recriminations and worn-out dogmas, that for far too long have strangled our politics." Barack remarked "that all are equal, all are free and all deserve a chance to pursue their full measure of happiness."

Renee Williams, Equal Opportunity Officer in the Department of Student Affairs and Institutional Relations organized the event

Dr. Jones (front) Adjunct, Political Science Department, gave a brief overview of the responsibilities of the President's Cabinet.

The Inauguration Watch consisted of a brief review of the responsibilities of the Cabinet by Dr. Jones, Adjunct in the Political Science Department, and a summary of the duties and power of the President given by History major, Brandon Jackson. Following the program the attendee watched the live streaming of the Inauguration procession and Obama's speech.

Renee Williams started the program with a personal account of relatives who endured discrimination and racism. Ms. Williams spoke of living in Harlem in the 50's and 60's and while Jim Crow laws were not in effect racism was still prevalent. The election of an African American to the Presidency was something many could not have imagined, so to Ms. Williams and many others this day was especially important.

The spirit in the auditorium was one of enthusiasm, and deep respect for Barack Obama and those who will accompany him as advisers and assistants. From student to faculty there was a shared commonality that seemed to come from the television screen into the room, so that although we were not in Washington we were still encouraged and inspired.

Book Review—Dreams From My Father
By Barack Obama

Now that Barack Obama is a household name it is hard to imagine that just 10 years ago there was very little written about him. His autobiography was first published in 1995 but didn't become a success until 2004 after his speech at the Democratic Convention. On February 24, 2009 at 3:00 p.m. the President of Prairie View A&M University, Dr. George Wright, will present a Book Review of Barack's autobiographical book: Dreams From My Father: A Story of Race and Inheritance as part of the Black History programming.

The Theme for Black History this year is "The Quest for Black Citizenship" which makes a review of Barack's book even more poignant. The questions of what constitute citizenship comes up when Barack discusses his roots in Kenya, his relationship with his father and his white extended family. It is further played out in his role as a community organizer and lawyer. The fact that the book was originally written as an exploration into black/white community relations is largely overshadowed by the personal reflections. However, the personal accounts mimic so many Americans that his story is one that could almost be told by millions. Almost, because Barack Obama will always have the unique experience of being the first African American elected to the Office of President of the United States.
